

A horror story of sexual harassment of women players puts the focus on Kerala Cricket Association

Coach Manu is in judicial custody under the POCSO Act after six girls registered complaints against him to the police; the parents of the trainees are upset with the way the issue has been handled

P.K. Ajith Kumar
M.R. Praveen Chandran

Kerala is all set to host the first season of its own franchise-based cricket league. Sanju Samson continues to be in and out of the Indian team, and his omission always causes an outcry in Kerala. A cricketer from the State - Minnu Mani - has been named captain of the Indian women's 'A' team. Two others - Asha Sobhana and Sajana Sajeewan - are in the Indian side for the ongoing Women's Asia Cup in Sri Lanka.

But, it is for none of these things that Kerala cricket is mostly in the news these days. A horror story of sexual harassment of women cricketers - many of them minors - in the State has put the focus on the Kerala Cricket Association (KCA).

Coach M. Manu is in judicial custody under the POCSO (Protection of Children from Sexual Offences) Act. Six girls have registered complaints against him to the police.

The KCA is protecting Manu as he is connected with a cricket club owned by a KCA official. The KCA didn't take any action against him despite the complaints. The KCA's statement that it wasn't aware of the issue until the police visited its premises for investigation is false

A PARENT OF ONE OF THE GIRLS
POCSO case after the survivor reportedly changed her statement. This time, the girl, who went for the KCA tournament, raised a complaint. Soon, many others came forward. The girls are understood to have gone through horrible experiences - physical and mental - while training under him. He had allegedly been exploiting girls for six years. That is why parents of the trainees are upset with the way the KCA has handled the issue. They feel Manu should not have been allowed to coach girls after complaints against him surfaced.

"Manu is a habitual offender and used his position as a coach to sexually assault minors," a parent of one of the girls told The Hindu. "He was manipulating and grooming children all the time for his sexual desires. He exploited the children's passion for the game and told them that they would have to cooperate with him to succeed. "When practice was going on at the nets at the KCA headquarters in Thiruvananthapuram, he would take the victims to the gymnasium on the sly to perform lewd acts. "The gym and rest room were the only places where there were no CCTV cameras and he pretty well knew that. "The KCA is protecting him as he is connected with a cricket club owned by a KCA official. The KCA didn't take any action against Manu despite the complaints. The KCA's statement that it wasn't aware of the issue until the police visited its premises for investigation is false."

Manu exploited the children's passion for the game and told them that they would have to cooperate with him to succeed cooperating with the Kerala police in the probe. The Hindu spoke to Vinod and he responded to the charges against him and the KCA. As we have often seen in the past, sexual harassment in sport takes time to come out. The victims - especially when they are teens, or even younger - would not have the courage to speak out and may not even understand the gravity of the crime committed against them. In the United States, it took two decades to bring Larry Nassar, the former team doctor of the national women's gymnastics team, to justice. Among his numerous victims were Olympic champions Simone Biles and Gabby Douglas.

Closer home, we have seen the public protests by India's wrestlers who risked their careers to seek justice as they challenged the mighty officialdom.

At a time when women's cricket is becoming increasingly popular, and more rewarding for the players with the arrival of the Women's Premier League, the scandal in Kerala should be an eye-opener.

Allegations made to derail Kerala Cricket League, says KCA secretary

M.R. Praveen Chandran
THIRUVANANTHAPURAM

The Kerala Cricket Association (KCA) secretary Vinod S. Kumar feels the organisation is being unfairly targeted.

"The KCA became aware of the matter only after Kerala Police visited the KCA headquarters as part of their investigation," Vinod told The Hindu.

"The KCA appointed M. Manu only after he was exonerated by the Kerala

The KCA appointed M. Manu only after he was exonerated by the Kerala High Court.

High Court. When the police case was first registered against him, many parents had given a statement to the police that the complaint was a fabricated one and it was alleged that the complainant was acting in vengeance after failing at selection trials. We appointed him for the second time following many requests from parents," Vinod said.

The KCA secretary added that Manu had resigned and had served his notice period but the KCA was forced to name him as a coach for the Pink tournament as none of the other qualified coaches were available.

"It was merely a stop-gap arrangement," he said. "The allegation that KCA is protecting Manu because he is the coach of my club is baseless. He has never been part of the coaching set-up of my club. It is true that he represented my club as a player for a while but also played for other clubs before he became a coach.

It is a bid to tarnish me and these allegations are made by people with vested interests. These people have tried to derail the Kerala Cricket League by approaching the prospective bidders to withdraw from the auction and even contacted actor Mohanlal and asked him to stay away from the KCA."

Vinod said the KCA had taken steps to avoid such incidents in future. "The association would have taken action if the survivor had approached us directly, but she contacted the Chidline and the KCA came to know of it only after police visited the premises for gathering evidence," he said.

"The earlier complaint was instigated by people who want to destroy the KCA."

Vinod said a woman coach had been assigned to assist Manu. "Surveillance cameras were replaced with high resolution ones and the entire area came under surveillance," he said. "However,

It is a bid to tarnish me and these allegations are made by people with vested interests the cameras couldn't be installed inside the gym and toilets for obvious reasons. We had also made it mandatory for parents to be present at the premises during training."
