

PROBLEM | Country cannot sustain social-economic-environmental costs of refugees; calls for their repatriation to Myanmar, says Chief Advisor

Bangladesh has reached its limits: Yunus on Rohingyas

ANI NEW YORK
The Chief Advisor of the interim government in Bangladesh, Muhammad Yunus, stressed on the urgent need for the repatriation of Rohingyas during a high-level meeting at an event on the sidelines of the 79th United Nations General Assembly in New York on Tuesday.

Nearly 1 million people have found safety in Bangladesh with a majority living in the Cox Bazar's region - home to the world's largest refugee camp

Yunus highlighted the significant challenges that Bangladesh has been facing due to the presence of over 1.2 million displaced Rohingyas from Myanmar. Yunus pointed out that while Bangladesh has shown empathy in hosting the Rohingyas, the costs associated with this situation - social, economic, and environmental - are considerable. He emphasised that Bangladesh has reached its limits, adding that repatriation remains the only sustainable solution to the ongoing crisis. "Despite hosting the Rohingyas with great empathy, a densely populated Bangladesh has been incurring so much in terms of social-economic-environmental costs. These culminate in a series of traditional and non-traditional security risks for us. Much of our own development gains are at stake. Clearly, Bangladesh has reached its limits. Therefore, as much as Bangladesh engages in humanitarian aspects or ensuring justice, repatriation of the Rohingyas remains the only sustainable solution to the protracted crisis," Yunus said. The Nobel laureate appealed to the international community to revisit its approach to the Rohingya crisis. He warned that the Rohingya crisis affected the whole region, not just Bangladesh,

He noted that several international resolutions have called for conditions conducive to the safe return of the Rohingyas. However, since the crisis began seven years ago, no Rohingya has been able to return to Myanmar, which has created uncertainty for the displaced community and their hosts, while humanitarian support continues to decline. "Several UN General Assembly, Human Rights Council and even Security Council Resolutions on Myanmar have asked for creating a conducive environment for the dignified, safe and sustainable return of the Rohingyas. Regrettably, with the root causes of the crisis in Myanmar not addressed in the last seven years, not a single Rohingya could return to their homeland," Yunus said. "Creating an inclusive society in Myanmar is key where all ethnic communities can live in peace and harmony."

Biden, Yunus affirm close ties

ANI NEW YORK
Chief Advisor to the Bangladesh interim government, Muhammad Yunus, met US President Joe Biden on Tuesday, on the sidelines of the 79th United Nations General Assembly.

President Biden congratulated Yunus on his recent appointment as the head of the interim government. The two leaders affirmed the "close partnership" between the United States and Bangladesh, which is rooted in shared democratic values and strong people-to-people ties, a White House statement read. President Biden welcomed further engagement between the two governments and offered continued US support as Bangladesh implements its new reform agenda.
