

Schools to merge traditional work experience with skill development

Revised programme will expose primary & high school students to diverse range of job sectors

POOJA NAIR @Kozhikode

IN a significant move to revamp the traditional school work experience programme, the state government has decided to integrate it with a comprehensive skill development initiative named Work Integrated Education.

Books to offer details of various industries

The books will provide students with a fundamental understanding of various industries, including agriculture, food and nutrition, fabric design, housing, media and entertainment, waste management and finance.

The department of public education has instructed schools to reschedule the existing work experience periods, previously held once a week, to accommodate skill development courses.

The State Council of Educational Research and Training (SCERT) has introduced new activity books for Classes V, VII, and IX. These resources are designed to foster a strong work ethic, instill respect for various occupations, and introduce students to emerging job markets.

The books will provide students with a fundamental understanding of various industries, including agriculture, food and nutrition, fabric design, housing, media and entertainment, waste management, electronics, printing and finance.

Students in Class V will begin exploring these sectors through a 60-hour programme, learning about different trades and industries. By the time they reach Class IX, students will have the opportunity to choose a specific skill or sector for more focused 30-hour training sessions.

Kozhikode to lead with new skill development centres

In Kozhikode, the government has taken an additional step by establishing skill development centres in 23 schools under the Samagra Shiksha Kerala (SSK) initiative. The state has allocated Rs 5 crore to these centres, which are expected to open by October 2.

ing Teaching-Learning and Results for States) scheme, an ambitious project aimed at imparting practical skills to students in the 18-23 age group, including those who have completed their higher secondary education but are no longer in school.

One school, GVHSS Baluseri, has been functioning as a pilot centre since the previous year, and 22 more schools will follow soon. Each centre will train two batches of 25 students in courses spanning 440 hours over a year, which will include significant practical sessions.

The District Level Skill Development Committee has confirmed that the project aims to bridge the gap between school education and employability by introducing courses that meet the demands of the job market. District project coordinator Dr A K Abdulhakeem emphasised that each skill will be offered to at least 30 students per school, ensuring that by the end of high school, every student will excel in a particular skill.

Road work: PWD to adopt innovative methods to combat climate change

LAKSHMI ATHIRA @Kozhikode

THE public works department (PWD) is set to adopt innovative and scientific construction methods to mitigate the impact of climate change on state roads. The PWD's roads wing views cement road stabilisation as the future of road construction in Kerala, aiming to enhance stability and durability.

Road design policy

For bridges, the PWD is introducing Ultra High Performance Fibre Reinforced Concrete, starting with the construction of a bridge in Tavannoor, Malappuram. Kerala is the first state to implement a formal road design policy aimed at combating climate change.

out the need for frequent maintenance," said PWD chief engineer (Roads) Ajith Ramachandran.

The department also plans to implement geotextiling technology in flood-prone areas. "Strong, synthetic fabrics will be incorporated into road construction to reinforce soil, prevent damage, and extend the lifespan of paved roads. This will be especially beneficial in low-lying areas like Alappuzha," Ajith added.

In addition, the PWD is evaluating the use of milling technology to maintain roads without re-tarring, alongside expanding the full depth reclamation method, which recycles raw materials from existing roads for new construction.

These innovations follow research by the Kerala Highway Research Institute (KHRI). "Our studies found that the rocks used in Kerala's road construction contain high levels of silica, increasing acidity and moisture buildup. Excess moisture accelerates road deterioration, especially during heavy rain. Adding hydrated lime and cement to the bituminous mix significantly reduces acidity, and the PWD will implement these findings in ongoing road projects," said KHRI joint director Sreejith G H.

For bridges, the PWD is introducing Ultra High Performance Fibre Reinforced Concrete, starting with the construction of a bridge in Tavannoor, Malappuram. Kerala is the first state to implement a formal road design policy aimed at combating climate change. "Most of these innovations are currently in the lab testing phase, and we aim to roll them out by 2025," Riyas added.
