Andhraites, Tamilians celebrate festival with gaiety, gusto in city

MEGHNA NATH
HYDERABAD

THE Andhra and Tamil communities plan to celebrate Navarati with pomp and gaiety. Various themes related to Indian mythology, such as the Mahabharata, have taken centre stage in decorations featuring clay and wooden dolls, known as Golu, showcased in their traditional style.

According to the members of the Tamil and Andhra communities, 'Golu,' or 'Bommala Koluvu,' is an age-old tradition followed in both the States to celebrate Navarati. Besides gods and goddesses, various social themes are also on display. It is the oldest tradition and artistic display of dolls, figurines on wooden planks, varies in odd numbers from one to nine, symbolising nine days, mainly by women and unmarried girls.

Kalyani Krishnan, a member of the Telangana Tamil Sangam, has been decorating clay dolls for the past 20 years. She shared, "During Dasara, we display them for ten days, following our tradition of setting up three, seven, or nine steps, and we must place a new doll each year. I come up with various themes annually. This year, I've created setups for Ram Rajya, Krishna Leela, and a Kanchi temple procession." "It is a traditional way of showcasing culture and depicting mythological stories through various displays of dolls and figurines during the nine auspicious days of Navratri. The displays are beautifully adorned with colourful lights," said T Sravanti, who has been organising Bommala Koluvu for the past two decades.

Raj Kumar, general secretary, Telangana Tamil Sangam, stated, "Each year, we create different themes for our doll displays inspired by Indian mythology. Additionally, we incorporate nine types of herbal and medicinal plants. This year, we have showcased Narasimha Swamy, a model of Tirupati, and the 63 Nayanmars." "Continuing the 22-year-old tradition of our grandparents and parents, we have set up our display to depict mythological events. It features various sets, including standing poses of Lord Vishnu and eight different forms of Goddess Lakshmi. We have also invited several families from the society to view the vibrant display, seek blessings from the deities, and enjoy our traditional sundal prasadam (a mixture of sprouts)," said Kiruthika, another member of the Telangana Tamil Sangam.

Pvt schools balk at govt order, hold classes on fest holidays

DESPITE the State government announcing Dasara holidays for all schools until October 14, private schools have violated the regulations by continuing to hold regular classes, particularly for higher grades.

Private school teachers highlighted that this issue occurs every year. Despite the government declaring holidays, private schools continue to hold classes under the guise of extra or special sessions, with some even conducting online classes. This is happening because the Education Department does not take any action; just issuing a circular is not enough; the department should conduct a sudden inspection and take stern action.

Nagaraju, a private school teacher, said, "During the summer vacation, we private teachers missed our break, and now, once again, we're going to miss the Dasara holidays due to extra classes for grades 8, 9, and 10. They are forcing both students and teachers to attend, claiming that student at-tendence will be recorded."

"We barely get ten days of Dasara holidays, but just like last year, despite the State government declaring holidays, our school is still conducting physical classes. A ten-day timetable has been set, exactly like regular school days. Many representation letters have been submitted to the concerned officials, as holding classes during vacation is unfair to teachers, and students, as they are in a festive mood. It's not right to pressure them during this time. Private schools consistently disobey the rules set by the education department, and it's time for the department to take stern action," said Sri Laxmi, another private school teacher.

Shabbir Ali, president, Telangana Private Teachers Forum (TPTF), said, "It is unfair to force private school teachers and higher-class students to work all 365 days. Issuing circulars alone is not enough; strict action needs to be taken. This also impacts students' mental health, as they deserve a break from their studies. However, private school management fails to understand this, focusing only on the completion of the syllabus."

UoH collaborates with UK based biotech company

HANS NEWS SERVICE
HYDERABAD

HYDERABAD-based SCIINV Biosciences, incubated at ASPIRE BioNEST in the University of Hyderabad (UoH), signed an MoU with MicroBira Ltd, a UK-based biotech company, to combat antimicrobial resistance with an initial investment of £1 million.

According to UoH officials, this partnership strengthens the ties between the UK and India while addressing one of the most urgent global health challenges—antimicrobial resistance (AMR).

Garth Wynn Owen, the British Deputy High Commissioner to Telangana and Andhra Pradesh, said, "The joint venture between SCIINV Biosciences and MicroBira Ltd is a fantastic step forward in the fight against AMR.

It's wonderful to see the UK-India innovation pipeline in action, and I'm particularly pleased that this partnership took shape following discussions during the UK's Global Business Innovation Programme (GBIP) visit to India in June 2024. We're excited to see the impact this will have in both countries and beyond."

The joint venture is driven by a common vision: effective and rapid identification of microorganisms is critical for controlling the spread of drug-resistant infections. By developing a fast, accurate, and affordable identification platform, the partners aim to reduce the misuse of broad-spectrum antibiotics—a key contributor to AMR, particularly in India," said Dr P Ratnakar, co-founder and director of SCIINV Biosciences.
