

High faecal contamination detected in Periyar

Analysis reveals that faecal contamination in water samples collected from nine monitoring stations is significant, indicating pollution from urban/domestic sources

The Hindu Bureau
KOCHI

High faecal contamination has been detected in water samples collected from the nine monitoring stations along the mainstream of the Periyar in Ernakulam and Idukki districts, according to an analysis of results from January 2022 to August 2024.

The research was done as part of the National Water Quality Monitoring Programme of the Central Pollution Control Board. The analysis revealed that faecal contamination was significant in the river, indicating its pollution from urban/domestic sources. A trend of low dissolved oxygen was found in the river water, especially on the lower stretches during summer, according to data from January to August in 2022, 2023, and 2024.

In 2024 (January to August), the faecal coliform value ranged from 2,800 MPN/100 ml and exceeded the desirable value of 500 MPN/100 ml at the sampling stations at Kalady,

Alarming surge

Year	Faecal coliform count
2022	63 to 9,200 MPN/100 ml
2023	10 to 7,000 MPN/100 ml
2024	2 to 2,800 MPN/100 ml

Kerala Water Authority, Aluva, and the sewage discharge points at Aluva, Muppattadam, Eloor, Puthalam, Purappalikkadu, Kalamassery, Panamkutty bridge. It had exceeded the maximum permissible limit of 2,500 MPN/100 ml at the sewage discharge points at Aluva and Eloor, according to the primary water quality criteria for outdoor bathing, according to the NWMP data.

The situation was no different in 2023.

The faecal coliform count exceeded the maximum permissible limit of 2,500 MPN/100 ml at Kalady, Kerala Water Authority at Aluva, and the sewage discharge points at Aluva, Muppattadam, Eloor, Puthalam, Purappalikkadu, Kalamassery and Panamkutty bridge.

Fishing workers rescued from vessel that sank off Goa coast return

Emotional scenes were played out when nine of the 11 fishing workers rescued from a vessel that had left for deep-sea fishing from the Munambam mini harbour and sank after colliding with an Indian Navy platform off the Goa coast last week returned to Munambam on Wednesday.

They were in tears as two of their co-workers remain missing since the accident on November 21. The missing persons are Janees, 29, of Colachel in Tamil Nadu, who had been serving as the boat driver since the last season, and Ramesh, 24, of Odisha. Many of the workers spotted marks of injuries they sustained in the accident.

"We were engaged in fishing when the driver called out that we may move to another spot since the catch seemed to be meagre. Just then, we heard a sound, and when we looked back, we saw the rear end of the boat getting lifted, and eventually the boat sank throwing us all into the water," recalled one of the workers.

The vessel with a 13-member crew reportedly collided with a submarine. Following the accident, the Navy rescued five workers, while the rest could not be found.

"According to the survivors, they were rescued by another vessel, thus taking the total number of rescued to 11. Janees probably got trapped in the driver's room in the boat, which sank," said Alby O., one of the three partners who owned the vessel.

Incidentally, none of the workers aboard the vessel are from Kerala. They are mostly from West Bengal, Odisha, and Tamil Nadu.

The seven-year-old vessel, Mar Thoma, had left the Munambam mini harbour for deep-sea fishing on November 15. Usually, the expedition lasts 10 to 12 days depending on how far the workers go in search of a catch.

Mr. Alby said they came to know about the accident only the next morning when one of the partners got a call, probably from the Navy or the Coast Guard, seeking details about the boat. "When we asked why they were asking about our boat, they said it was for verification, and that they got our number from the Fisheries department. They asked us whether we had been able to contact the workers aboard the vessel, to which we said we would be able to contact them only when they returned," he added.

"We received calls again in the afternoon and evening and only then it was confirmed to us that the boat involved in the accident was indeed ours," Mr. Alby said. The workers who returned have been put up in lodge rooms here.
